Abstract

The resurrection of Jesus Christ is the central event of Christian faith. The New Testament presents the crucified Jesus as truly dead, buried, raised on the third day, encountered bodily by His disciples, and subsequently exalted to heaven. This paper examines the resurrection through a two-dimensional theological framework: the spiritual existence of Christ after death and the bodily resurrection of Christ on the third day.

Particular attention is given to Acts 2:27–32, 1 Peter 3:18–20, Luke 24:39–43, John 20:24–29, 1 Corinthians 15:42–49, and Ephesians 4:8–10. The study proposes that Christ's death should not be understood as the destruction of His personal existence. His body was placed in the tomb, while the New Testament speaks of Christ in relation to the realm of the dead and to the Spirit. On the third day, Christ was raised bodily. In the theological model proposed here, this can be described as the restoration or reunion of Christ's spiritual and bodily existence, resulting in glorified resurrection life.

The paper distinguishes carefully between what Scripture explicitly states and what is inferred theologically. The phrase “the Spirit of Jesus re-entered His earthly body” is therefore treated as a theological formulation rather than a direct biblical quotation.

1. Introduction

The Christian proclamation begins with a simple but profound claim:

Jesus Christ died and rose from the dead.

The resurrection is not merely a metaphor for hope, memory, spiritual influence, or the continuation of Jesus' teaching. The earliest Christian proclamation presents resurrection as an act of God by which the crucified Jesus was raised from death.

Paul summarizes the importance of this event:

“Christ has been raised from the dead, the firstfruits of those who have fallen asleep.”
— 1 Corinthians 15:20

The resurrection therefore concerns the victory of Christ over death itself.

The present study examines a theological question:

What happened to Jesus between His death and His resurrection, and how should His spiritual and bodily existence be understood in relation to the resurrection on the third day?

The proposed model distinguishes three stages:

1. Christ's death and burial

2. Christ's existence in the realm beyond earthly life
 3. Christ's bodily resurrection on the third day

2. The Death and Burial of Jesus

The New Testament consistently presents Jesus as genuinely dying.

His body was taken down from the cross and placed in a tomb. The burial is significant because the resurrection is presented as a resurrection from the dead, not merely a spiritual awakening.

The tomb therefore represents the location of Jesus' dead body during the interval between crucifixion and resurrection.

This is important for understanding Paul's statement about Christ:

“He was buried, and he was raised on the third day according to the Scriptures.”
— 1 Corinthians 15:4

The sequence is therefore:

Death → Burial → Resurrection

The resurrection cannot be separated from the reality of Jesus' death.

3. Christ and the Realm of the Dead

One of the most important passages for understanding the interval between death and resurrection is Acts 2.

Peter interprets Psalm 16 in relation to Christ and declares that Christ was not abandoned to Hades and that His flesh did not undergo corruption.

This produces an important distinction:

Christ's body was in the grave, while Christ was not ultimately abandoned to the realm of the dead.

Acts 2:31 is especially significant because it connects both dimensions:

- the realm of the dead/Hades
- Christ's flesh/body
- the resurrection

The text therefore provides biblical grounds for discussing Christ's existence beyond ordinary earthly life while His body remained in the tomb.

4. “Made Alive in the Spirit”

Another important passage is 1 Peter 3:18:

Christ was “put to death in the flesh but made alive in the spirit.”

The following verses speak of Christ in connection with “the spirits in prison” (1 Peter 3:19). The interpretation of this passage has been debated throughout Christian history. The expression “spirits in prison” is unique in the New Testament and has generated several interpretations.

Nevertheless, the passage provides an important conceptual contrast:

put to death in the flesh → made alive in the spirit

This language is especially relevant to the theological model proposed in this paper.

It does not mean that Jesus ceased to exist when His body died.

Rather, death did not terminate Christ's personal existence.

5. Christ's Descent to the Dead

The Christian tradition has often described Christ's post-mortem descent as the Descent into Hades or Descent to the Dead.

Several passages have been associated with this doctrine, especially:

- Acts 2:27–31
- 1 Peter 3:18–20
- Ephesians 4:8–10

Ephesians speaks of Christ's descent and ascent:

“He who descended is the one who also ascended far above all the heavens.”
— Ephesians 4:10

The precise meaning of the descent is debated. Therefore, a scholarly treatment should not simply assume that “hell” in these passages means the final place of eternal punishment.

The Greek term ᾗδης (Hades) can refer to the realm of the dead.

Thus, for academic precision, the expression:

“Christ entered hell”

should preferably be explained as:

“Christ descended to the realm of the dead (Hades), according to the traditional interpretation of these passages.”

6. The Body Remained in the Tomb

While the New Testament discusses Christ's existence in relation to death and the Spirit, the Gospel narratives simultaneously emphasize the tomb.

The women came to the tomb and found that Jesus' body was no longer there.

This is fundamental to the resurrection proclamation.

The resurrection therefore involved something happening to the body.

Christian resurrection is not merely:

Jesus' spirit continued to exist.

It is:

Jesus was raised from the dead.

Acts 2 explicitly connects Christ's resurrection with the fact that His flesh did not undergo corruption.

7. Resurrection on the Third Day

The central Christian proclamation is that Jesus rose on the third day.

Paul summarizes the earliest proclamation:

“Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures, and that he was buried, and that he was raised on the third day.”

— 1 Corinthians 15:3–4

The resurrection therefore means more than the continued existence of Jesus' soul.

The same Jesus who died was proclaimed as having been raised.

This gives resurrection an important dimension of personal continuity.

Jesus did not become another person.

The crucified Jesus is the risen Jesus.

8. The Risen Body of Jesus

Luke provides one of the strongest passages against understanding Jesus' resurrection as merely spiritual.

When the disciples thought they were seeing a spirit, Jesus said:

“See my hands and my feet, that it is I myself. Touch me, and see.”

— Luke 24:39

The text emphasizes that Jesus possesses flesh and bones.

The risen Christ also ate food in the presence of His disciples (Luke 24:41–43).

John likewise describes the risen Jesus showing Thomas the wounds associated with the crucifixion (John 20:24–29).

These narratives establish a major theological principle:

The resurrection of Jesus was bodily.

It was not simply the appearance of Jesus' spirit without bodily existence.

9. Resurrection Body and “Spiritual Body”

Paul uses an unusual expression in 1 Corinthians 15:44:

“It is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body.”

The Greek expression is:

σῶμα πνευματικόν — sōma pneumatikon

literally, “spiritual body.”

This should not be interpreted as meaning “a body made of non-material spirit.”

The expression describes a body transformed and characterized by the Spirit. Scholarly biblical reference material likewise understands “spiritual body” as referring to the resurrection body rather than a disembodied existence.

Paul's contrast is therefore:

perishable → imperishable

dishonor → glory

weakness → power

natural body → spiritual body

This provides a theological bridge between Jesus' earthly body and His glorified resurrection existence.

10. The Proposed Spiritual-and-Bodily Model

The theological model developed in this study can now be stated more precisely.

Stage 1 — Earthly life

Jesus possesses ordinary human bodily existence.

Jesus Christ → earthly body + human life

Stage 2 — Death

Jesus truly dies.

Jesus Christ → death of the body

His body is placed in the tomb.

Stage 3 — Existence beyond earthly bodily life

The New Testament speaks of Christ in relation to the Spirit and the realm of the dead.

Christ → Spirit / realm of the dead

This is the stage that the present theory describes as spiritual resurrection or spiritual victory.

Stage 4 — Third day

Christ is raised from the dead.

Within the theological model proposed here:

Christ's spiritual existence is reunited with His bodily existence.

His body is not merely restored to ordinary mortal life; it is transformed into resurrection life.

Stage 5 — Glorified resurrection

Christ now possesses resurrection life.

Earthly body → transformed/glorified resurrection body

Stage 6 — Ascension

The risen Christ ascends into heaven.

Thus:

Death → Descent → Victory → Resurrection → Glorification → Ascension

11. “The Spirit of Jesus Entered His Body”

The statement:

“On the third day, the Spirit of Jesus Christ entered His earthly body.”

can be used as a theological description of the resurrection process, but it requires an important scholarly qualification.

The New Testament does not explicitly state in those exact words that Christ's Spirit entered His dead body on the third day.

Instead, Scripture gives us several pieces of evidence:

1. Christ truly died.
2. His body was buried.
3. Christ was associated with the realm of the dead.
4. Christ was “made alive in the spirit” (1 Peter 3:18).
5. Christ was raised from the dead.
6. The risen Christ possessed bodily characteristics.
7. The risen Christ was subsequently glorified and exalted.

Therefore, the proposed statement is best described as a theological synthesis of these passages, rather than as a direct biblical quotation.

This distinction strengthens rather than weakens the theory because it allows the researcher to distinguish textual evidence from theological inference.

12. Christ's Victory Over Death

The resurrection is ultimately a victory over death.

Paul declares:

“Death has been swallowed up in victory.”
— 1 Corinthians 15:54

And:

“O death, where is your victory? O death, where is your sting?”
— 1 Corinthians 15:55

Christ's resurrection therefore has both an individual and cosmic significance.

He did not merely escape His own death.

According to Christian theology, His resurrection establishes the defeat of death as a ruling power.

This is why Paul calls Christ the “firstfruits” of those who have died (1 Corinthians 15:20).

The resurrection of Christ becomes the foundation for the future resurrection of believers.

13. Spirit and Body Are Not Enemies

An important conclusion from the resurrection narratives is that Christianity does not ultimately present salvation as the permanent escape of the spirit from the body.

The Christian hope is resurrection.

The body itself is transformed.

Paul's theology therefore moves toward:

Spirit + transformed body + immortal life rather than:

Spirit without body forever.

This is particularly important when interpreting the phrase “spiritual body.”

A spiritual body is still a body.

It is a body transformed by God's Spirit and liberated from corruption and death.

14. Jesus Christ as the Supreme Example

Jesus is the supreme example of resurrection because His resurrection demonstrates the complete victory over death.

The sequence can therefore be summarized:

Before death

Divine Word → Incarnation → Jesus Christ → earthly body

Death

Crucifixion → physical death → burial

Between death and resurrection

Christ → spiritual existence → realm of the dead

Resurrection

Third day → Christ raised from the dead

Resurrection body

Mortal existence → glorified resurrection body

Ascension

Risen Christ → heaven

This provides a theological model in which resurrection is neither merely spiritual nor merely biological.

It is God's victory over death expressed in the restoration and transformation of the whole person.

15. “Conquering Hell” and “Conquering Earth”

My earlier theological formulation can also be expressed in a more precise way.

I proposed:

“By His spiritual body, Lord Jesus Christ conquered hell. By His earthly body, Lord Jesus Christ conquered the earth.”

As a theological statement, this can be developed as follows.

Victory in the realm of the dead

Christ's descent to the realm of the dead can be interpreted as part of His triumph over death and the powers associated with death.

Victory in the earthly realm

Christ's incarnation, crucifixion, and bodily resurrection demonstrate His victory within the human and earthly sphere.

The resurrection therefore connects the two dimensions:

Realm of the dead → victory

Earthly tomb → resurrection

Heaven → exaltation

However, Scripture does not explicitly use the phrase “Christ conquered hell with His spiritual body.” That should remain identified as theological interpretation.

16. Resurrection Versus Reincarnation

This distinction is essential.

Reincarnation

In ordinary religious/philosophical usage:

One life → death → another earthly embodiment

Christian resurrection

Death → resurrection → transformed life

Jesus' resurrection is not reincarnation.

Jesus did not return as another person.

The risen Jesus remained the same identifiable person who had been crucified.

The wounds, identity, discipleship relationships, and continuity between the crucified and risen Jesus are central to the Gospel accounts.

Therefore:

Resurrection = victory over death

while reincarnation = another cycle of embodiment

These concepts should not be treated as synonymous in a scholarly Christian study.

17. Theological Synthesis

The evidence allows the following theological synthesis:

Jesus Christ truly died.

His body was placed in the tomb.

His personal existence was not extinguished by death.

The New Testament speaks of Christ in relation to the Spirit and the realm of the dead.

On the third day, God raised Christ from the dead.

The risen Christ possessed a real but transformed body.

Christ subsequently ascended into heaven.

Theologically, therefore, Christ's resurrection can be described as the victorious restoration and transformation of His complete personal existence.

Within the model proposed in this paper:

The earthly body of Christ remained in the tomb during the interval of death, while Christ continued in spiritual existence. On the third day, Christ was raised bodily, and His resurrection body became the glorified manifestation of His victorious life over death.

Again, the specific phrase “His Spirit entered His earthly body” is a theological explanation of the resurrection, not a sentence explicitly recorded by the New Testament.

18. Conclusion

The resurrection of Jesus Christ stands at the center of Christian theology because it demonstrates that death did not have the final word over Christ.

The biblical data present several interconnected realities:

Jesus died.

Jesus was buried.

Christ was not abandoned to Hades.

Christ was made alive in relation to the Spirit.

Christ was raised on the third day.

Christ appeared bodily to His disciples.

Christ possessed a transformed resurrection body.

Christ ascended into heaven.

The resurrection therefore cannot be reduced either to the survival of a disembodied spirit or to a simple return to ordinary biological life.

It is a transformation from death to immortal life.

Theologically, this allows the resurrection of Christ to be understood in two connected dimensions:

Spiritual victory over death and the realm of the dead

and

Bodily resurrection into glorified life.

The first should be described carefully as a theological interpretation of passages concerning Christ's Spirit and descent to the dead; the second is unmistakably central to the New Testament resurrection proclamation.

The final Christian confession is therefore:

Jesus Christ died, Jesus Christ descended into the realm of death, Jesus Christ rose from the dead on the third day, Jesus Christ conquered death, and Jesus Christ lives eternally.

His resurrection is the foundation of Christian hope:

— John 14:19

Key Greek Terms

Greek term	Transliteration	Meaning
σῶμα	sōma	body
σὰρξ	sarx	flesh
ψυχὴ	psychē	soul/life
πνεῦμα	pneuma	spirit
ᾅδης	hadēs	Hades, realm of the dead
ἀνάστασις	anastasis	resurrection, rising
ἐγείρω	egeirō	raise, awaken
πνευματικός	pneumatikos	spiritual, Spirit-related

Final Research Thesis

The resurrection of Lord Jesus Christ may be understood as the decisive victory of Christ over death in both the spiritual and bodily dimensions of human existence. His death did not terminate His personal existence; His body remained in the tomb while the New Testament speaks of His existence in relation to the Spirit and the realm of the dead. On the third day He was raised bodily, receiving transformed resurrection life, and He subsequently ascended into heaven. Thus, Christ's resurrection is the supreme Christian revelation of victory over death and the foundation of the future resurrection hope.

1. English Word: Resurrection

English spelling

Resurrection

Basic meaning

The English word resurrection means:

The act of rising again from the dead; being raised from death to life.

It comes through Old French/Latin from the Latin resurrectio, meaning “a rising again,” from resurgere, “to rise again.”

The word therefore contains the fundamental idea:

rise + again

In Christian theology, resurrection specifically refers to God raising the dead to life.

2. Principal Greek Word

The principal New Testament Greek noun for resurrection is:

ἀνάστασις

Transliteration: anastasis

Meaning:

- resurrection
- rising
- rising again
- a rising from the dead

The word is related to the verb:

ἀνίστημι

Transliteration: anistēmi

Meaning:

- to raise up
- to stand up
- to rise
- to get up
- to arise

The basic conceptual movement is:

ἀνά (ana) → up / again

ἵστημι (histēmi) → stand / cause to stand

Therefore:

ἀνάστασις → rising up / standing again

This makes anastasis particularly significant for the Christian doctrine of resurrection.

3. Resurrection From the Dead

A particularly important New Testament expression is:

ἀνάστασις ἐκ νεκρῶν

anastasis ek nekrōn

Literally:

“resurrection from the dead”

Here:

ἀνάστασις = resurrection / rising

ἐκ = out of / from

νεκρῶν = dead persons / the dead

Thus the expression conveys the idea:

rising from among the dead.

This is especially important in the proclamation concerning Jesus Christ.

4. Jesus' Resurrection

The New Testament repeatedly describes Jesus as being raised from the dead.

For example, Paul says:

“Christ has been raised from the dead.”
— 1 Corinthians 15:20

The Greek terminology places emphasis on the transition:

death → raising → life

Jesus was not merely remembered after His death.

He was proclaimed as risen.

5. Resurrection and the Greek Verb ἐγείρω

Another extremely important Greek word is:

ἐγείρω

Transliteration: egeirō

Meaning:

- to raise
- to awaken
- to raise up
- to get up
- to cause to rise

This verb is frequently used for God's raising of Jesus.

For example, the resurrection proclamation can be expressed with the concept:

God raised Jesus from the dead.

Thus two important Greek concepts work together:

ἀνάστασις

resurrection / rising

ἐγείρω

raise / cause to rise

The noun describes the event:

ἀνάστασις → resurrection

The verb describes the action:

ἐγείρω → raise

6. Resurrection Is More Than “Survival of the Spirit”

This distinction is important for the theory developed in our previous discussion.

If a person's spirit continues to exist after bodily death, that does not necessarily mean that the person has undergone ἀνάστασις.

The New Testament concept of resurrection concerns being raised from death.

This is particularly clear in the resurrection of Jesus.

The risen Jesus says:

“See my hands and my feet, that it is I myself. Touch me, and see; for a spirit does not have flesh and bones as you see that I have.”

— Luke 24:39

Therefore, Jesus' resurrection was not presented merely as the continuation of His spirit.

It involved the resurrection of the person who had died.

7. Resurrection Body

Paul provides an especially important theological explanation in 1 Corinthians 15.

He writes:

“It is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body.”

Greek:

σπείρεται σῶμα ψυχικόν, ἐγείρεται σῶμα πνευματικόν

The important terms are:

σῶμα = body

ψυχικόν = natural / soulish

ἐγείρεται = it is raised πνευματικόν = spiritual

Notice something important:

Paul does not say:

“It is sown a body; it is raised as a spirit.”

He says:

“It is raised a spiritual body.”

Therefore:

Resurrection does not mean the disappearance of the body. It means the transformation of bodily existence.

8. The Resurrection of Jesus: Continuity and Transformation

The resurrection of Jesus contains two apparently different realities:

Continuity

The risen Jesus is the same Jesus who was crucified.

He has:

- the same identity
- the same disciples
- the wounds of crucifixion
- continuity with His earthly life

Transformation

At the same time, His resurrection existence is different from ordinary mortal existence.

Paul describes resurrection life as:

corruptible → incorruptible

dishonor → glory

weakness → power

natural body → spiritual body

Therefore, the resurrection is:

continuity of personal identity + transformation of bodily existence.

9. Resurrection and the Third Day

The apostolic proclamation specifically emphasizes the third day.

1 Corinthians 15:3–4 says that Christ:

1. died
2. was buried
3. was raised on the third day

The sequence is crucial:

Θάνατος → ταφή → ανάστασις

Death → burial → resurrection

The resurrection therefore presupposes genuine death.

Jesus did not merely faint.

He died.

And precisely because He died, His rising is proclaimed as resurrection.

10. Resurrection and Death

Greek has another important word:

θάνατος

thanatos

Meaning:

death

Thus an important theological contrast is:

θάνατος — death versus

ἀνάστασις — resurrection

The Christian proclamation is therefore:

Death did not have the final victory.

Christ passed through death and emerged victorious.

Paul expresses this dramatically:

“Death has been swallowed up in victory.”
— 1 Corinthians 15:54

11. Resurrection and Life

Another important Greek word is:

ζωή

zōē

Meaning:

life

The Gospel of John particularly connects Jesus with life.

Jesus says:

“I am the resurrection and the life.”
— John 11:25

Greek:

ἐγώ εἰμι ἡ ἀνάστασις καὶ ἡ ζωὴ

Literally:

“I am the resurrection and the life.”

This is extraordinarily significant.

Jesus does not merely say:

“I teach resurrection.”

He says:

“I am the resurrection and the life.”

Thus resurrection becomes connected directly with the person of Christ.

12. Resurrection as Victory

The vocabulary can therefore be arranged as a theological sequence:

Greek	Transliteration	Meaning
θάνατος	thanatos	death
νεκρός	nekros	dead

ταφή	taphē	burial
ἀνάστασις	anastasis	resurrection
ἐγείρω	egeirō	raise / awaken
σῶμα	sōma	body
πνεῦμα	pneuma	spirit
ζωή	zōē	life
δόξα	doxa	glory
ἀφθαρσία	aphtharsia	incorruption / imperishability

The theological movement is:

θάνατος → νεκρός → ταφή → ἐγείρω → ἀνάστασις → σῶμα → ζωή → δόξα → ἀφθαρσία

Or:

Death → Dead → Burial → Raised → Resurrection → Body → Life → Glory → Immortality

13. Resurrection and Ascension Are Different

It is also important not to confuse:

Resurrection

ἀνάστασις

= rising from the dead

with:

Ascension

The New Testament uses language concerning Christ being taken up into heaven.

The sequence is:

Resurrection first → Ascension afterward.

Jesus first rises from the dead.

Then He appears to His disciples.

Then He is taken up into heaven.

Acts 1:9–11 describes this ascension.

Therefore:

Resurrection is not identical to ascension.

Resurrection concerns victory over death.

Ascension concerns Christ's exaltation and going to heaven.

14. Resurrection and My Proposed Spiritual/Bodily Framework

My proposed theological model can now be expressed using the Greek vocabulary.

First dimension

Christ dies bodily

σῶμα → θάνατος

His body is placed in the tomb.

Second dimension

The New Testament speaks about Christ in relation to πνεῦμα and the realm of the dead.

This is the basis for your proposed spiritual dimension of Christ's resurrection victory.

Third dimension

ἐγείρω → ἀνάστασις

God raises Christ from the dead.

Fourth dimension

σῶμα πνευματικόν

The risen Christ possesses transformed resurrection existence.

Fifth dimension

ἀνάληψις / exaltation

The risen Christ ascends to heaven.

Thus my model can be represented:

Earthly Body

↓ death

Tomb

Spiritual existence / realm of the dead

Divine raising

↓

Resurrection

↓

Glorified Resurrection Body

Ascension into Heaven

15. The Meaning of “Resurrection” in One Sentence

The deepest lexical and theological meaning can therefore be summarized:

Resurrection (ἀνάστασις, anastasis) is the rising from death into life, particularly the divine raising of the dead into renewed and ultimately transformed existence.

In the case of Jesus Christ:

Jesus Christ truly died, was buried, was raised from the dead on the third day, appeared bodily to His disciples, and ascended into heaven.

This is why the resurrection of Jesus is the foundational example of Christian resurrection.

16. Final Word Study

English

RESURRECTION

- = rising again
- = rising from death
- = being raised from the dead

Greek

ἀνάστασις — ANASTASIS

- = rising
- = standing up

= resurrection
= rising from the dead

Related verb

ἐγείρω — EGEIRŌ

= raise = awaken
= raise up
= cause to rise

Central theological contrast

θάνατος — THANATOS

= death

ἀνάστασις — ANASTASIS

= resurrection

Central Christian proclamation

Χριστὸς ἀνέστη

= Christ is risen.

The resurrection therefore means not merely that Christ's spirit survived death, but that Christ Himself conquered death and was raised into victorious, transformed life.

The Resurrection of Lord Jesus Christ: Spirit and Body

“Resurrection means rising from the dead.”

Among all the examples of resurrection, the greatest and most important for Christian faith is the resurrection of Lord Jesus Christ.

Jesus Christ did not merely teach about resurrection. He Himself declared:

“I am the resurrection and the life.”

— John 11:25

His resurrection reveals the victory of life over death, light over darkness, and Christ over the powers of death.

Two Dimensions of Resurrection

The resurrection of Jesus Christ can be contemplated through two dimensions:

1. Resurrection of Spirit
2. Resurrection of Body

This twofold framework helps us think about what happened to Christ between His death, His descent to the realm of the dead, His resurrection on the third day, and His ascension into heaven.

1. Resurrection of Spirit

In this theological framework, resurrection of spirit refers to the continuation and transformation of spiritual existence beyond earthly death.

When the earthly body dies, the spirit is not necessarily understood as being destroyed. The spirit continues to exist in the spiritual realm.

The New Testament speaks about Christ in relation to the Spirit after His death:

“He was put to death in the flesh but made alive in the spirit.”

— 1 Peter 3:18

This verse provides an important starting point for considering the spiritual dimension of Christ's victory.

The New Testament also speaks about Christ's relationship to the realm of the dead (1 Peter 3:19; Ephesians 4:9).

Thus, within this theological model:

Earthly death does not mean the destruction of spiritual existence.

The Spiritual Body

The idea of a spiritual body is particularly important in Paul's teaching.

Paul writes:

“It is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body.”
— 1 Corinthians 15:44

The Greek expression is:

σῶμα πνευματικόν — sōma pneumatikon

meaning:

“spiritual body.”

This does not mean that the resurrection person becomes merely an invisible spirit.

Rather, Paul speaks of a body transformed and characterized by the Spirit.

The movement is:

natural → spiritual

perishable → imperishable

weakness → power

mortality → immortality

Reincarnation and Resurrection

Within the proposed framework, reincarnation may be considered a form of continuing spiritual existence in another embodiment.

However, there is an important distinction.

The word reincarnation normally means that a person returns to earthly existence in another body or form.

Christian resurrection normally means something different:

the dead person is raised by God.

Therefore, reincarnation and resurrection should not be presented as identical biblical doctrines.

2. Resurrection of Body

The second and central dimension is the resurrection of the body.

This is where the resurrection of Jesus Christ becomes unique.

Jesus truly died.

His body was taken down from the cross.

His body was placed in the tomb.

But on the third day, Jesus rose from the dead.

Paul summarizes the apostolic proclamation:

“He died ... he was buried ... he was raised on the third day.”
— 1 Corinthians 15:3–4

The resurrection was therefore not simply the survival of Jesus' spirit.

Jesus Himself was raised.

The Same Jesus Who Died Rose Again

The Gospel accounts emphasize continuity between the crucified Jesus and the risen Jesus.

After His resurrection, Jesus said:

“See my hands and my feet, that it is I myself.”
— Luke 24:39

He invited His disciples to see and touch Him.

Thomas was also invited to examine the wounds of crucifixion (John 20:27).

Therefore:

The Jesus who was crucified is the Jesus who was resurrected.

His identity did not change.

His body, however, entered a new and glorified mode of existence.

The Third Day

The third day is central to Christian resurrection faith.

The sequence is:

Death

↓

Burial

The realm of the dead

Third day

↓

Resurrection

↓

Glorified life

↓

Ascension

This is the great mystery of Easter:

Death was not the end of Jesus Christ.

The tomb could not hold Him.

Spirit and Body Together

Your proposed theological model places special emphasis on the relationship between Christ's Spirit and His body.

It can be expressed this way:

Christ's earthly body was in the tomb, while His spiritual existence continued beyond earthly death. On the third day, Christ was raised bodily from death into transformed resurrection life.

In this model, resurrection is not merely spiritual and not merely physical.

It involves the whole person.

The spiritual and bodily dimensions come together in resurrection life.

However, we should make an important scholarly distinction: Scripture does not explicitly say that "Jesus' Spirit entered His earthly body on the third day." That statement is a theological explanation of the biblical resurrection narratives, rather than a direct biblical quotation.

Jesus Christ Conquered Death

The resurrection demonstrates the ultimate victory of Christ.

Paul declares:

"Death has been swallowed up in victory."
— 1 Corinthians 15:54

And Revelation presents the risen Christ declaring:

"I was dead, and behold I am alive forevermore."
— Revelation 1:18

This is the heart of the Christian message.

Jesus entered death.

Death could not retain Him.

Jesus rose.

Jesus lives forever.

From Earth to Heaven

The resurrection did not end with the empty tomb.

After appearing to His disciples, Jesus ascended into heaven.

Therefore the complete movement of Christ can be described:

Heaven → Earth → Death → Realm of the Dead → Resurrection → Heaven

The Divine Word who came into the world did not remain conquered by death.

The risen Christ returned to heavenly glory.

This connects beautifully with John's opening declaration:

“In the beginning was the Word.”

The Word became flesh (John 1:1, 14), entered human existence, passed through death, rose again, and was exalted.

Jesus: The Resurrection and the Life

The deepest statement comes directly from Jesus:

“I am the resurrection and the life.”

— John 11:25

Notice that Jesus does not merely say:

“I teach resurrection.”

He says:

“I am the resurrection.”

Resurrection is therefore inseparable from the person of Christ.

He is the source of resurrection life.

He is the conqueror of death.

He is the giver of eternal life.

A Twofold Theological Picture

The proposed framework can be summarized:

Resurrection of Spirit

Earthly death → continued spiritual existence → spiritual victory → heavenly existence

Resurrection of Body

Earthly death → burial → raising from the dead → transformed resurrection body → heavenly ascension

And in Jesus Christ, these dimensions meet:

Spirit + transformed body → glorified Christ

This is why Jesus is the supreme example of resurrection.

Resurrection Is Victory, Not Merely Survival

There is an important difference between survival after death and resurrection.

A person continuing to exist spiritually after death is one concept.

A dead person being raised by God is another.

The resurrection of Jesus combines these themes in the Christian confession: Jesus truly died, yet death did not destroy His life; He was then raised bodily from the dead.

Therefore the resurrection is not merely:

“Jesus' spirit survived.”

It is:

“Jesus Christ rose from the dead.”

That is the foundation of Christian faith.

Conclusion

The resurrection of Lord Jesus Christ can be contemplated as the greatest manifestation of God's victory over death.

His earthly body entered the tomb.

His spiritual existence was not destroyed by death.

The New Testament speaks of Christ in relation to the Spirit and the realm of the dead.

On the third day, Christ was raised from the dead.

His resurrection body was transformed and glorified.

He appeared to His disciples.

Then He ascended into heaven.

Therefore:

Jesus Christ conquered death not by escaping death, but by passing through death and rising victorious from it.

The resurrection proclaims:

Death is not the final word.

The grave is not the final destination.

The body is not destined for permanent corruption.

The Spirit is not defeated by death.

And above all:

“I am the resurrection and the life.” — Jesus Christ, John 11:25

Lord Jesus Christ is risen.

Lord Jesus Christ lives forever.

Lord Jesus Christ is the Resurrection and the Life.

The Resurrection of Jesus Christ: A Two-Dimensional Study of Spirit and Body

A Biblical, Greek-Linguistic, and Theological Research Paper

Abstract

The resurrection of Jesus Christ stands at the center of Christian faith. The New Testament proclamation is that Jesus truly died, was buried, was raised from the dead on the third day, appeared to His disciples, and was exalted into heaven. This paper examines the resurrection through a proposed two-dimensional theological framework: resurrection of spirit and resurrection of body.

The study argues that these two dimensions should not be treated as identical to the standard New Testament lexical meaning of the Greek term ἀνάστασις (anastasis), “resurrection” or “rising.” Rather, the distinction is proposed as a theological model for examining the relationship between Christ's spiritual existence after death and His bodily resurrection. The paper examines the Greek vocabulary of resurrection, body, spirit, death, Hades, raising, and spiritual body, with particular attention to Acts 2:27–32, 1 Peter 3:18–20, Luke 24:39–43, John 20:24–29, and 1 Corinthians 15.

The central thesis is that Jesus Christ's resurrection cannot be reduced to the survival of His spirit. The same Jesus who died was raised, and the resurrection narratives emphasize bodily continuity while Paul describes the resurrection body as transformed and imperishable. The paper therefore proposes that Christ's resurrection can be understood as a victory encompassing both the spiritual and bodily dimensions of His existence, while acknowledging that the specific claim that “Christ's Spirit re-entered His earthly body on the third day” is a theological inference rather than an explicit statement of the New Testament.

1. Introduction

The word resurrection expresses one of the most fundamental concepts of Christianity: rising from the dead.

The supreme Christian example is Jesus Christ.

The apostolic proclamation is not simply that Jesus' teaching continued after His death. Nor is it merely that His disciples experienced His spiritual presence. The proclamation is that:

Jesus Christ died.

Jesus Christ was buried.

Jesus Christ was raised from the dead.

Paul summarizes this proclamation:

“Christ died for our sins ... he was buried ... he was raised on the third day.”
— 1 Corinthians 15:3–4

The resurrection consequently involves the mystery of the relationship between death, spirit, body, resurrection, and heavenly life.

This paper explores that relationship through a proposed distinction between:

1. Resurrection of Spirit
2. Resurrection of Body

The purpose is not to claim that these are the two technical categories explicitly established by the New Testament. Rather, they provide a theological framework for investigating the biblical evidence.

2. The Meaning of Resurrection

2.1 The English word

The English noun resurrection means:

rising again, especially rising from death.

Its Christian theological meaning is therefore:

The raising of a dead person to life.

The word contains the fundamental idea of rising again.

3. The Greek Word for Resurrection

The principal New Testament Greek noun is:

ἀνάστασις

Transliteration

anastasis

Meaning

- resurrection
- rising
- rising up
- rising from the dead

The related verb is:

ἀνίστημι

anistēmi

Meaning:

- to rise
- to stand up
- to raise up
- to arise

Another major New Testament verb is:

ἐγείρω

egeirō

Meaning:

- to raise
- to raise up
- to awaken
- to cause to rise

These words are particularly important in descriptions of Jesus' resurrection.

Thus:

ἀνάστασις = resurrection

while:

ἐγείρω = raise / cause to rise

4. Resurrection and Death

The Greek word for death is:

θάνατος

thanatos

The word for dead is:

νεκρός

nekros

Therefore, the basic theological contrast is:

θάνατος → ἀνάστασις

death → resurrection

Or:

νεκρός → ανάστασις

dead → resurrection

Christian resurrection therefore presupposes genuine death.

Jesus did not merely appear to die.

He truly died.

His resurrection is meaningful precisely because He passed through death.

5. The Death and Burial of Jesus

The Gospel narratives describe the crucifixion and burial of Jesus.

His body was taken down from the cross and placed in a tomb.

This produces the first major stage of the resurrection narrative:

Jesus' earthly life

Crucifixion

Death

↓

Burial

Tomb

The body in the tomb is essential to the resurrection story.

If resurrection were merely the survival of Jesus' spirit, the empty tomb would not carry the same theological significance.

The New Testament, however, presents the empty tomb together with appearances of the risen Jesus.

6. Spirit and Body

Two Greek words become especially important:

πνεῦμα — pneuma

Meaning:

spirit

σῶμα — sōma

Meaning:

body

The New Testament does not simply treat these concepts as interchangeable.

Paul can distinguish bodily existence from spiritual existence while nevertheless speaking of the resurrection body.

In 1 Corinthians 15:44 he writes:

“It is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body.”

Greek:

σῶμα πνευματικόν

sōma pneumatikon

Literally:

spiritual body

This expression is crucial for understanding the Christian resurrection.

7. What Is a Spiritual Body?

The phrase “spiritual body” should not be interpreted as meaning a bodyless spirit.

Paul still uses the noun:

σῶμα — body

The transformation concerns the nature and condition of bodily existence.

Paul describes the transformation through several contrasts:

Present condition	Resurrection condition
Perishable	Imperishable
Dishonor	Glory
Weakness	Power
Natural body	Spiritual body
Mortality	Immortality

Thus the resurrection body is:

a body transformed by God.

This is particularly important for the resurrection of Jesus.

8. The Spiritual Dimension of Christ's Death

One of the most significant passages is 1 Peter 3:18:

Christ was “put to death in the flesh but made alive in the spirit.”

The Greek text contrasts:

σαρκί — in flesh

and

πνεύματι — in spirit

The interpretation of this passage is debated, particularly concerning the identity of the “spirits in prison” mentioned in the following verse.

Nevertheless, the text provides an important theological basis for discussing the spiritual dimension of Christ's existence after death.

It establishes a contrast between:

death in the flesh

and

life in the spirit.

9. Christ and Hades

Another significant passage occurs in Acts 2.

Peter applies Psalm 16 to Jesus and says that God did not abandon Christ to Hades.

The Greek word is:

ᾅδης

Hades

Hades refers to the realm of the dead and should not automatically be equated with the final place of eternal punishment commonly represented by the English word “hell.”

Acts 2:31 is particularly important because Peter speaks of both Christ's relation to Hades and His flesh.

Thus the passage connects:

Christ

Hades

flesh

resurrection

These themes are fundamental to any investigation of what occurred between Jesus' death and resurrection.

10. Christ's Descent to the Dead

The New Testament contains passages that have traditionally been associated with Christ's descent to the dead.

Important texts include:

- Acts 2:27–31
- 1 Peter 3:18–20
- Ephesians 4:8–10

Ephesians speaks of the One who descended and then ascended:

“He who descended is the one who also ascended far above all the heavens.”
— Ephesians 4:10

Christian tradition subsequently developed the doctrine commonly known as the Descent into Hades or Descent to the Dead.

The precise interpretation of these passages remains a matter of scholarly debate.

Therefore, the statement:

“Jesus entered hell.”

requires qualification.

A more precise formulation is:

“Jesus is understood in Christian tradition as descending to the realm of the dead, commonly associated with Hades.”

11. The Proposed Resurrection of Spirit

Within the theological framework proposed in this study, resurrection of spirit describes the spiritual dimension of existence after earthly death.

The concept proposes:

earthly bodily death

spiritual victory

heavenly existence

The model may also speak of a heavenly spiritual body, drawing conceptually on Paul's phrase “spiritual body” in 1 Corinthians 15:44.

However, this must be distinguished from the exact lexical meaning of ἀνάστασις.

The Greek word itself means resurrection/rising and does not by itself establish a separate technical category called “resurrection of spirit.”

Consequently, resurrection of spirit is a theological category proposed for interpretation, not a standard New Testament lexical category.

12. Resurrection of Body

The second category is much more directly connected with the New Testament resurrection proclamation.

Resurrection of body means:

the raising of the dead person into renewed and transformed bodily life.

Jesus Christ is the supreme Christian example.

Luke emphasizes that the risen Jesus could be seen and touched:

“Touch me and see, for a spirit does not have flesh and bones as you see that I have.”
— Luke 24:39

Jesus also ate before His disciples (Luke 24:41–43).

John records Jesus inviting Thomas to examine His wounds (John 20:27).

These narratives strongly emphasize bodily continuity.

13. The Same Jesus Who Died Rose Again

One of the most important theological conclusions is personal identity.

The Jesus who rose was not another person.

The risen Jesus is the same Jesus who was crucified.

His identity remains continuous.

At the same time, His bodily condition is transformed.

Therefore resurrection can be described as:

continuity of personal identity + transformation of bodily existence.

This provides an important distinction between resurrection and reincarnation.

14. Resurrection and Reincarnation

The terms resurrection and reincarnation should not be treated as synonymous.

Reincarnation

Generally means:

death → another earthly embodiment

Resurrection

Means:

death → being raised to life

In Christian theology, resurrection is not normally a cycle of repeated earthly lives.

Jesus did not die and return as another person.

The risen Jesus remained the same identifiable person.

15. The Third Day

The third day occupies a central position in the Christian proclamation.

Paul writes:

“He was buried, and he was raised on the third day.”

— 1 Corinthians 15:4

The sequence is:

Death

↓

Burial

Third day

Resurrection

The resurrection therefore represents a divine reversal of death.

The one who entered death emerges alive.

16. Did Christ's Spirit Enter His Body?

The theological proposition being examined is:

“On the third day, the Spirit of Jesus Christ entered His earthly body.”

This statement deserves careful treatment.

The New Testament does not explicitly state this sentence.

What Scripture explicitly gives us is:

- Jesus died.
- Jesus was buried.
- Christ is described in relation to the Spirit.
- Christ is associated with the realm of the dead.
- God raised Jesus from the dead.
- Jesus appeared bodily.
- Jesus ascended into heaven.

The statement that Christ's Spirit entered or was reunited with His body is therefore a theological synthesis of these biblical data.

It is a possible way of describing the relationship between Christ's spiritual existence and bodily resurrection, but it should not be presented as a direct quotation from Scripture.

17. The Resurrection Body of Jesus

The resurrection body of Jesus represents both continuity and transformation.

Continuity

Jesus:

- remains Jesus;
- bears the marks of crucifixion;
- is recognized by His disciples;
- interacts with them;
- possesses bodily existence.

Transformation

Jesus:

- is no longer subject to ordinary mortal death;
- possesses resurrection life;
- is glorified;
- ultimately ascends into heaven.

Paul's resurrection theology provides the conceptual framework:

mortal → immortal

perishable → imperishable

natural → spiritual

18. Resurrection and Ascension

Resurrection and ascension should be distinguished.

Resurrection

ἀνάστασις

= rising from the dead.

Ascension

= Christ being taken up/exalted into heaven.

The sequence is:

Death → Resurrection → Appearances → Ascension

Jesus first rose from the dead.

Then He appeared to His disciples.

Then He ascended into heaven.

Therefore, the resurrection is the foundation for the ascension.

19. Christ's Victory Over Death

The ultimate meaning of resurrection is victory.

Paul declares:

“Death has been swallowed up in victory.”
— 1 Corinthians 15:54

Jesus' resurrection therefore represents:

victory over death

victory over corruption victory over the grave

victory over the powers of death

Revelation 1:18 presents the risen Christ declaring:

“I was dead, and behold I am alive forevermore.”

The sequence is extraordinary:

I was dead → I am alive → forevermore

Death becomes a defeated power.

20. Christ's Victory in the Spiritual and Earthly Realms

The theological framework developed here can express Christ's victory in two dimensions.

Christ's existence was not extinguished by death.

The New Testament speaks of Christ in relation to the Spirit and the realm of the dead.

This provides the theological basis for speaking of Christ's spiritual victory.

Bodily dimension

Christ's dead body was not left permanently in the grave.

God raised Him from death.

This provides the basis for Christ's bodily victory.

Thus:

Christ's victory over death encompasses both the spiritual and bodily dimensions of His existence.

The formulation that Christ conquered the realm of the dead spiritually and conquered earthly death bodily is therefore a theological interpretation of the biblical resurrection story.

21. Jesus as “the Resurrection and the Life”

The Gospel of John contains perhaps the most profound statement for this study.

Jesus says:

“I am the resurrection and the life.”

— John 11:25

Greek:

ἐγώ εἰμι ἡ ἀνάστασις καὶ ἡ ζωή

The key words are:

ἀνάστασις — resurrection

ζωή — life

Jesus does not merely announce resurrection.

He identifies Himself with it.

This means that Christian resurrection theology ultimately centers not merely on an event but on the person of Jesus Christ.

Christ is the Resurrection.

Christ is the Life.

22. Resurrection and Eternal Life

The resurrection is also connected with eternal life.

John's Gospel repeatedly connects Christ with life.

Jesus declares:

— John 14:19

The resurrection therefore becomes the foundation for Christian hope.

Christ's resurrection is not an isolated miracle.

It is the beginning and guarantee of the resurrection hope of believers.

Paul calls Christ:

“the firstfruits of those who have fallen asleep.”

— 1 Corinthians 15:20

The first resurrection harvest points toward a future harvest.

23. A Theological Model

The theory developed in this study can be represented schematically:

Earthly existence

Christ — earthly body

↓

Death

Crucifixion → physical death

Burial

Body → tomb

Spiritual dimension

Christ → Spirit / realm of the dead

Victory

Death cannot retain Christ

Third day

God raises Christ

↓

Resurrection body

Body → transformed/glorified resurrection body

Appearances

Jesus → disciples

Ascension

Risen Christ → heaven

This model provides a unified way of discussing the spiritual and bodily dimensions of the resurrection.

24. Important Linguistic Distinctions

English	Greek	Basic meaning
Resurrection	ἀνάστασις	rising, resurrection
Raise	ἐγείρω	raise, awaken
Dead	νεκρός	dead
Death	θάνατος	death
Body	σῶμα	body
Spirit	πνεῦμα	spirit

Soul/life	ψυχή	soul, life
Hades	ᾅδης	realm of the dead
Life	ζωή	life
Glory	δόξα	glory
Immortality	ἀθανασία	immortality

These words demonstrate that resurrection theology involves a network of concepts rather than a single word.

25. Resurrection Is Not Merely the Return of a Dead Body

Biblical resurrection is not simply the restoration of a corpse to ordinary biological life.

Jesus' resurrection differs from ordinary resuscitation.

A person who is resuscitated eventually dies again.

The resurrection body described by Paul is characterized by:

imperishability glory

power

immortality

Jesus therefore did not simply return temporarily to His former mortal existence.

His resurrection introduced a new mode of life.

26. Theological Significance

The resurrection of Christ establishes several fundamental Christian claims.

1. Death does not have ultimate authority.

Christ conquered death.

2. The person is not reduced to bodily corruption.

Christ's resurrection establishes continuity of personal existence.

3. The body has eternal significance.

Christian hope is not simply escape from embodiment.

4. Spiritual and bodily existence are related.

The resurrection demonstrates the transformation of the whole person.

5. Christ's resurrection establishes future resurrection.

Christ is the firstfruits of those who will be raised.

27. Final Theological Proposition

The proposed theological framework can therefore be stated:

The resurrection of Lord Jesus Christ has both a spiritual and a bodily dimension. At His death, His earthly body was placed in the tomb, while His personal existence continued in relation to the Spirit and the realm of the dead. On the third day, God raised Jesus Christ from the dead. His resurrection was bodily, yet His body was transformed into glorified resurrection existence. His resurrection therefore represents the victory of Christ over death in both the spiritual and bodily dimensions, followed by His ascension into heaven.

The phrase “His Spirit entered His earthly body” can be used as an explanatory theological model for this process, but it should remain clearly identified as an inference rather than an explicit New Testament statement.

28. Conclusion

The resurrection of Jesus Christ is the central proclamation of Christianity.

Jesus Christ truly died.

He was buried.

His earthly body remained in the tomb.

The New Testament speaks of Christ in relation to the Spirit and the realm of the dead.

On the third day, He was raised from the dead.

His resurrection body was real, identifiable, and yet transformed.

He appeared to His disciples.

He ascended into heaven.

Therefore, the resurrection of Jesus cannot be reduced to either mere spiritual survival or mere restoration of a corpse.

It is the divine transformation of death into victorious life.

The central Christian confession can therefore be expressed:

Jesus Christ died.

Jesus Christ rose from the dead.

Jesus Christ conquered death.

Jesus Christ lives forever.

And Jesus' own declaration gives the theological center of the entire study:

“I am the resurrection and the life.”

— John 11:25

Final Formula

DEATH → BURIAL → SPIRITUAL EXISTENCE → VICTORY → RESURRECTION → GLORIFIED BODY → ASCENSION → ETERNAL LIFE

In this framework, Lord Jesus Christ is the supreme revelation of resurrection because the One who died is the One who rose, and the One who rose is the One who lives forever.

1. Introduction

Independent Scientist and Independent Interdisciplinary Researcher Pawan Upadhyay proposes a distinctive theological model for understanding the death, descent, and resurrection of Lord Jesus Christ.

The central proposition is that the death of Jesus Christ on the cross involved the death of His earthly physical body, while His Divine Spirit remained alive with a spiritual body.

According to this model, Christ's resurrection was not merely the return of a dead physical body to life. Rather, it was the unification of three dimensions:

1. Divine Spirit of Jesus Christ
2. Spiritual body
3. Earthly physical body

In this interpretation, Christ's victory occurred in two corresponding realms:

By His spiritual body, Divine Spirit conquered the realm of hell/death; by the resurrection of His earthly body, Christ conquered death in the earthly realm.

This note records the model as a proposed theological hypothesis, not as an established scientific finding or as a claim that every element is explicitly stated in the biblical text.

2. Pawan Upadhyay's Six-Stage Resurrection Model

Stage 1 — Jesus Christ Died on the Cross

According to Pawan Upadhyay's model, Jesus Christ truly died on the cross.

The crucifixion therefore involved genuine physical death.

The Gospel narratives describe Jesus' death and His subsequent removal from the cross.

The first stage is:

Jesus Christ → Crucifixion → Death

3. Stage 2 — Jesus Christ Was Buried

After His death, Jesus' earthly body was placed in the tomb.

Thus:

Earthly body → grave/tomb

The burial is essential to the model because the physical body remains associated with the earthly realm during the interval preceding resurrection.

Paul's summary of the early Christian proclamation is:

— 1 Corinthians 15:3–4

4. Stage 3 — The Body Died, but the Spirit Remained Alive

The central distinction in Pawan Upadhyay's model occurs at the moment of death.

He proposes:

Only the earthly physical body died; the Divine Spirit of Jesus Christ remained alive with His spiritual body.

The model therefore distinguishes:

Earthly physical body

subject to physical death from:

Divine Spirit

not destroyed by physical death

and:

Spiritual body

the spiritual embodiment associated with Christ's Divine Spirit.

The conceptual structure is:

Divine Spirit + Spiritual Body

physical death of earthly body

This interpretation seeks to explain how Christ could genuinely die physically while simultaneously continuing to exist spiritually.

5. Stage 4 — Divine Spirit With Spiritual Body Conquered Hell

According to Pawan Upadhyay's view, Christ's Divine Spirit, together with His spiritual body, entered the realm of hell/death and conquered it.

This corresponds conceptually with New Testament passages traditionally associated with Christ's descent to the dead, particularly:

- 1 Peter 3:18–20
- Ephesians 4:8–10
- Acts 2:27–31

The Greek term ᾗδης (Hades) is important here. It can refer to the realm of the dead and should not automatically be equated with the final state of eternal punishment.

According to the proposed model:

Divine Spirit + Spiritual Body

Descent to the realm of the dead

Victory over hell/death

The theological meaning of this victory is that death could not imprison Christ.

6. Stage 5 — The Third-Day Return to the Earthly Body

The fifth stage is the distinctive element of Pawan Upadhyay's model.

He proposes that on the third day:

The Divine Spirit of Lord Jesus Christ, together with His spiritual body, broke through the tomb/grave and re-entered His physical earthly body.

This results in:

Divine Spirit

Spiritual Body

Earthly Physical Body

Resurrection

The model therefore understands the empty tomb not simply as the disappearance of Jesus' corpse but as the consequence of the resurrection and transformation of His bodily existence.

Important textual qualification

The New Testament explicitly states that Jesus was raised from the dead and that His tomb was found empty.

However, it does not explicitly state in these exact terms that:

“Christ's Divine Spirit with His spiritual body re-entered His earthly physical body.”

That particular mechanism is Pawan Upadhyay's theological hypothesis derived from the broader biblical resurrection data.

7. Stage 6 — Unification of Spirit, Spiritual Body, and Earthly Body

According to the model, the resurrection of Jesus Christ represents a unification:

1. Divine Spirit

πνεῦμα — pneuma

2. Spiritual body

σῶμα πνευματικόν — sōma pneumatikon

3. Earthly physical body

σῶμα — sōma

The resurrection therefore becomes:

Divine Spirit + Spiritual Body + Earthly Body = Resurrected Christ

This is the central proposition of Pawan Upadhyay's model.

8. The Meaning of “Spiritual Body”

Paul uses the expression:

σῶμα πνευματικόν — spiritual body

in 1 Corinthians 15:44.

The phrase should not automatically be understood as a completely immaterial or bodyless existence.

Paul retains the word:

σῶμα — body

His argument concerns transformation:

perishable → imperishable

dishonor → glory

weakness → power

natural body → spiritual body

Pawan Upadhyay's model applies this concept to the resurrection of Christ by proposing that Christ possessed spiritual embodiment in addition to His earthly physical embodiment.

This application is theological interpretation, rather than an explicit statement that Jesus possessed two bodies simultaneously.

9. Christ's Victory Over Hell

The first major victory in the model is spiritual.

Pawan Upadhyay proposes:

“By His spiritual body, the Divine Spirit of Lord Jesus Christ conquered hell.”

The theological sequence is:

Divine Spirit

Spiritual Body

↓

Realm of the Dead

Victory

The model therefore interprets Christ's descent as an active movement of divine victory rather than as passive existence among the dead.

The New Testament's precise description of what Christ did among the “spirits in prison” remains debated. Consequently, the stronger claim that Christ specifically conquered hell by means of His spiritual body should be identified as the researcher's theological interpretation.

10. Christ's Victory Over the Earthly Realm

The second major victory occurs through the bodily resurrection.

Pawan Upadhyay proposes:

“By the resurrection of His earthly body, He conquered the earth.”

This can be understood symbolically and theologically as Christ's victory over:

- physical death
- the grave
- corruption
- mortality
- earthly powers that oppose divine life

The resurrection transforms the meaning of the tomb.

The tomb represents:

death

but the resurrection transforms it into:

victory over death.

11. Two Victories

The model therefore proposes a correspondence:

Realm	Christ's existence	Victory
Spiritual realm	Divine Spirit + spiritual body	Victory over hell/death
Earthly realm	Resurrected earthly body	Victory over earthly death

Heaven

Glorified risen Christ

Eternal reign

This produces the theological formula:

Spiritual Body → Victory over Hell

Resurrected Earthly Body → Victory over Earthly Death

Glorified Christ → Heavenly Exaltation

12. Resurrection as Unification

The distinctive contribution of Pawan Upadhyay's model is its definition of resurrection as unification.

Rather than defining resurrection merely as:

body → life

the model proposes:

Spirit + Spiritual Body + Earthly Body → Resurrection

This gives resurrection a multidimensional character.

The resurrection is understood as the restoration of unity between dimensions of Christ's existence that were separated by physical death.

Thus:

Before death

Divine Spirit + Earthly Body

During death

Divine Spirit + Spiritual Body

and

Earthly Body → Tomb

Resurrection

Divine Spirit + Spiritual Body + Earthly Body

Ascension

Risen and glorified Christ → Heaven

13. Relationship to 1 Corinthians 15

Paul's resurrection theology is particularly significant for this model.

Paul writes:

“It is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body.”

This establishes that resurrection involves bodily transformation.

Paul then describes Christ as the firstfruits of those who have died.

Therefore, the resurrection of Christ is not an isolated event.

It becomes the foundation for the future resurrection of humanity.

Pawan Upadhyay's model extends this resurrection framework by emphasizing the relationship between:

Spirit

spiritual body

and earthly body.

14. Relationship to 1 Peter 3

1 Peter 3:18 is particularly important:

Christ was “put to death in the flesh but made alive in the spirit.”

This passage provides one of the principal biblical texts for examining the distinction between Christ's physical death and spiritual life.

The model interprets this contrast as supporting the proposition:

fleshly/earthly death ≠ destruction of Christ's spiritual existence.

However, the exact meaning of “made alive in the spirit” is debated among scholars, so the verse should not be presented as direct proof of the complete three-part model.

15. Relationship to Acts 2

Acts 2:27–31 contains another important element.

Peter applies Psalm 16 to Christ and says that He was not abandoned to Hades and that His flesh did not undergo corruption.

This creates a connection between:

Christ

Hades

flesh

resurrection

The passage therefore provides significant biblical material for investigating the relationship between Christ's spiritual existence and His bodily resurrection.

16. Resurrection Versus Reincarnation

Pawan Upadhyay's broader framework has also used the expression “resurrection of spirit” in relation to reincarnation.

This requires a strong scholarly distinction.

Reincarnation

Normally means:

death → another earthly embodiment

Resurrection

Normally means:

death → being raised to life

The Christian resurrection of Jesus is not normally understood as reincarnation.

Jesus did not return as another person.

The risen Jesus remained the same Jesus who was crucified.

Therefore, if “resurrection of spirit” is used to describe reincarnation, it should be explicitly identified as Pawan Upadhyay's proposed terminology, rather than presented as the standard biblical definition.

17. Scientific and Interdisciplinary Status of the Model

The designation “Independent Scientist and Independent Interdisciplinary Researcher” identifies the perspective from which Pawan Upadhyay is proposing this model.

The resurrection itself is a theological and historical claim concerning Jesus Christ. The proposed existence of a spiritual body is a metaphysical/theological proposition.

It is therefore important not to confuse:

scientific hypothesis

with theological hypothesis.

The model can be investigated interdisciplinarily through:

- biblical studies
- Greek linguistics
- theology

- philosophy of religion
- ancient anthropology
- comparative religious studies
- history of early Christianity

But the existence and properties of a spiritual body are not presently matters that can be established by ordinary empirical scientific measurement.

19. Central Thesis

Pawan Upadhyay's proposed thesis can be summarized in one statement:

“Jesus Christ died on the cross and His earthly physical body was buried. During His physical death, His Divine Spirit remained alive with a spiritual body. The Divine Spirit of Christ, together with His spiritual body, descended into the realm of the dead and conquered hell. On the third day, the Divine Spirit with His spiritual body returned to and was united with His earthly physical body, resulting in the resurrection of Jesus Christ. Thus, Christ’s resurrection represents the unification of Divine Spirit, spiritual body, and earthly body. Through His spiritual existence Christ conquered the realm of death, and through His bodily resurrection He conquered earthly death.”

20. Conclusion

Pawan Upadhyay's resurrection model presents the resurrection of Jesus Christ as a multidimensional event.

It begins with the genuine physical death of Jesus.

His earthly body is buried.

His Divine Spirit remains alive.

His spiritual existence is associated with a spiritual body.

He descends to the realm of the dead and, in the proposed interpretation, conquers hell.

On the third day, Christ is raised.

His spiritual and bodily dimensions are unified.

His earthly body enters transformed resurrection existence.

He then ascends into heaven.

The resulting theological formula is:

DIVINE SPIRIT + SPIRITUAL BODY + EARTHLY BODY =
RESURRECTED CHRIST

And the twofold victory is expressed as:

SPIRITUAL VICTORY

Divine Spirit + Spiritual Body → Victory over the realm of death

BODILY VICTORY

Resurrection of Earthly Body → Victory over earthly death

The supreme Christian proclamation remains:

“He is not here; for He has risen, as He said.”

— Matthew 28:6

Researcher's Final Proposition

The resurrection of Lord Jesus Christ was not merely the survival of a spirit and not merely the revival of a physical body. In Pawan Upadhyay's proposed theological model, resurrection is the unification of Divine Spirit, spiritual body, and earthly body into victorious resurrection life.

Methodological Note

This document records Pawan Upadhyay's proposed theological view. It should not be read as a claim that the Bible explicitly teaches every component of the model. In particular, Scripture does not explicitly state that Jesus possessed a separate spiritual body during the interval between death and resurrection or that His Spirit literally re-entered His earthly body on the third day. Those propositions constitute the interpretive and original contribution of this model and require further investigation through biblical, linguistic, historical, philosophical, and comparative research.
